Artillery Battle Still Being Waged Around Arras While Germans Make Slight Gains in Argonne.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Paris, July 2.—The German forces have reached the Russian positions in Krasnick in the southern district of Poland, according to an official statement. The statement says that the Russian forces in the region west of Zamosc have been driven back.

WARSAW IS OBJECTIVE.

London, July 2.—Evidently bent on a decisive victory against the Russians, the Germans are not sending troops to the western front, but are concentrating their efforts to capture the Russian capital, Warsaw. The German forces have advanced to the Vistula and Bug Rivers.

Fighting at Arras.
Artillery activity continues unabated in the Arras region of France. There are no signs of infantry action on that front, although it is generally possible that many thousands of shells are being fired without any definite objective. In the Argonne region, the Germans on June 28 captured some ground, though at the expense of heavy losses.

A further report regarding the Dardanelles operations, claims that the German troops have not been checked in their efforts to capture the city. The German forces have advanced to the Vistula and Bug Rivers.

Explosion Wrecked Zeppelin.
Amsterdam is responsible for the report that a Zeppelin dirigible balloon was accidentally destroyed by an explosion today when leaving its base at Breslau.

During the month of June 38 British ships aggregating slightly more than 20,000 tons, were sunk by submarines or mines, with a loss of 111 lives.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Bern, Switzerland, July 2.—An amendment to the Swiss Federal Constitution, providing for the levying of a special war tax to meet the expenses incurred in mobilization of the army for the maintenance of Swiss neutrality, which was submitted to a referendum vote of the entire people, has been accepted by an overwhelming majority, the vote being 435,500 to 25,500.

The new taxes are both on property and income. Persons possessing less than $2,000 worth of property, or earning less than $500 a year are exempt. The rate of tax is progressive, ranging from $1 to $15 per thousand on property and from $2 to $100 per thousand on income.

The present cost of the war to Switzerland is estimated at nearly $5,000,000 a month.

BENNETT GIVES WORD

Administration Leader Promises Progressives Phillip Will Abandon Plan If His Measures Fail at This Session.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Madison, July 2.—Phillip for United States senator was the slogan sounded by Senator Bennett today in a senate debate.

When the agricultural consolidation bill came up Senator Everett offered an amendment making the present state fair board an advisory board subsidiary to consolidation board. He asked that the bill be laid over until Wednesday.

Bennett Makes Statement.
"This bill is made for slaughter like the rest," declared Senator Bennett. "Senators who are asking to have this matter laid over for the purpose of making slight amendments cannot be satisfied. They are afraid that if all these bills go through, Governor Phillip will be candidate for United States senator. If they don't, they will have to stay at home and fight out these measures in gubernatorial campaign."

Senator Bennett is a recognized floor leader for the administration and by close touch with Governor Phillip. The bill was laid over until Wednesday by a vote of 16 to 10, and the senate adjourned until two this afternoon.

BRITISH SHIPS AGAIN MISUSING U. S. FLAG?

Washington Awaits Complete Information on Matter Before Sending Note to English Government.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Washington, July 2.—Complete information concerning the alleged misuse of the American flag by British ships, apparently a result of German submarine attacks, which may result in the dispatch of another note to Great Britain on the subject, was awaited today by Washington officials. A thorough inquiry already has been started, based on official reports.

Representations concerning the misuse of the American flag by British ships, which will be included in a general note which the United States intends soon to send to Great Britain, covering restraints of American commerce in connection with the so-called blockade.

Secretary Lansing disclosed today that the investigation being conducted by the United States government into cases of alleged misuse of the American flag to deceive German submarine commanders has not yet been completed, but that evidence in specific cases probably would be called to the attention of Great Britain when the new note is included in the new note.

SCHEPPS WILL TELL BECKER CASE SECRET

Man Says He Has Truth Which Governor Whitman Can Have for the Asking—Says Becker is Innocent.

New York, July 2.—Sam Schepps, upon whom the state relied during the first trial of Charles Becker to cooperate the testimony of Jack Rosenthal, Yellow and Bridge Webster, the three informers, who today as saying he had the "secret in the Becker case" and would tell Governor Whitman should the governor ask him to.

Becker was arrested on July 20 for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, unless the federal courts intervene. "I hold the secret of the Becker case, and I will tell the governor if he asks for it," Schepps was quoted as saying. "Whitman can have it for the asking. The story is so clear for anyone will believe it, but as for saying, 'do you want me to bring Becker back to Broadway and take his place in the electric chair?' I am myself enough in this case and there's nothing to tell any more."

The "secret" to which Schepps was quoted as having referred, is believed to be what was said at a recent meeting between Mrs. Charles Becker and Jack Rosenthal, who was the self-confessed accomplice in the plot which resulted in the killing of Rosenthal, has said, according to his attorney, that Charles Becker had absolutely nothing to do with the murder.

A statement to this effect was made by H. T. Marshall, an attorney.

STATE'S WITNESSES TELL ACTS SHOWING THAW TO BE INSANE

With Documentary Evidence Submitted First Witnesses Are Called In Sanity Trial.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
New York, July 2.—After the introduction of further documentary evidence in the sanity trial of Harry K. Thaw here today, the state called its first witness James M. Barrett, a policeman assigned to the Tenderloin police station on the night Harry Thaw was taken there, after the killing of Stanford White. He gave testimony that Thaw, while in the cell, was under a delusion that he heard the voices of little girls screaming.

Thaw asked me two or three times, 'and the witness, 'where are those little girls screaming?' There were there were no little girls. Some women had been arrested and one shouted and carried on and I told him 'there were no women and he said, 'Oh, no they're not. They're little girls I hear screaming.' He asked me who was beating and abusing them? I saw when brought into the station, the witness said, 'he was thrown back and his eyes were staring.'"

Thomas F. Lynch, on duty at the station the following day, said Thaw had talked to him also about little girls.

Thaw's conduct when he was forcibly deported from Canada was described by Frank McFadden, a Canadian immigrant, who was in charge of Thaw while in jail at Sherbrook, Quebec. When told he was to be deported he said Thaw "fared up and was awful rage." He threw a bottle through a window and said, "I'm trying to kidnap me." McFadden thought Thaw's conduct on this occasion very irrational.

Heard Thaw one of the immigration inspectors who told Thaw that Thaw appeared "dangerously mad."

Justice Hendrick and the jury at Harry K. Thaw's sanity trial had heard most of the state documentary evidence when the court reconvened today. Counsel for the state brought calling the first of them this afternoon. Policemen who arrested Thaw immediately after the shooting of Stanford White were among those who testified.

Satisfied that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw will be here early next week in response to a subpoena calling her as a witness, the state's attorney had abandoned preparations to obtain a detachment to compel her presence in court.

The Caucasian, the last of the three vessels sent to the bottom by a German submarine today, was a tank ship of 4,500 tons gross. She was on her last eastern voyage across the Atlantic. She left Port Arthur May 12 and Newport News May 20 for Dartmouth. She was 365 feet long, 45 feet beam and 23 feet deep. She was built at Sunderland in 1899, and owned by the Petroleum Steamship company of London.

U. S. SUPREME COURT OPERATING 25 YEARS

With Adjournment Highest Tribunal in Country Will Have Closed Memorial Career.

Washington, July 2.—Adjournment of the Supreme Court for the summer months marks the completion of twenty-five years operation of the present judicial system, instituted by the new constitution. This law created the nine circuit courts of appeals, which virtually became a sort of sub-supreme courts to relieve the highest tribunal of the great pressure of cases which were congesting its docket and contributing to the law's delays.

At the opening of the new system the Supreme Court was three years behind its work, and much more time elapsed before the cases were decided. Three years passed between the time a case was docketed there and the time it was presented, completed and the court's decision.

Today, the Supreme Court is only one year behind on its work. During the 25 years, 10,750 cases have been filed there—an average of 430 a year. The last six years, 18,000 cases were filed, which included 1,200 waiting when the new system went into effect. But for the latter the court now would be about 18,000 cases behind.

During the court year just ended, 528 cases were filed and 539 were disposed of and the docket now contains 555, the smallest number during the last six years. The three years in the court's history saw only 1,000 cases disposed of. They were 1890, 1912 and 1913.

BIG CHICAGO YARDS CLOSED BY STRIKE

Lumber Yards and Brick Plants Suspend Operations as Result of Labor War.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Chicago, July 2.—Forty-three of Chicago's large lumber yards and six brick-making plants were closed today for business today, throwing several thousand men out of employment. The establishments will not accept delivery of any building material until the strike is ended. The strike is settled. The eleventh hour decision of the allied building construction and material interest to continue manufacture operations, but not selling, place a more serious aspect on the lockout against the carpenters and other striking building trade workmen.

The strike for peace in the building trade situation was made today by Edward Heintz. Mr. Heintz invited representatives of the carpenters' union, the building contractors and the material manufacturers' organization to meet with him to discuss the situation. Mr. Heintz said he thought they would be able to get together on some plan which would restore peace. The building material plants are still running today, but deliveries were not being made.

U. S. TROOPS KEEP WATCH OF HUERTA

MEXICAN BORDER IS CAREFULLY PATROLLED FORMER DICTIONARY TATOR FROM FLIGHT.

RELIEF NEAR CAPITAL

Washington Receives Word That Red Cross Expedition to Starving Inhabitants of Mexico City, Nears Destination.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
Washington, July 2.—General Victoriano Huerta, former dictator and President of Mexico, whose defiance of Vera Cruz by American marines and bluejackets, will not be permitted to enter Mexico from the United States at a time when his presence would be a further menace to the plans of this government to restore peace. If the federal government can prevent it, Determination to keep Huerta from crossing the southern border of the United States and thus complicating the present Mexican situation with a new revolution reached the point today where four different ways of detaining the former Mexican chief were under consideration by various departments of the United States.

Secretary Lansing, in referring to the formal request for the extradition of Huerta from military authorities of the state of Chihuahua, indicated that the federal government could, if chosen, withdraw its present charge of violating American neutrality laws and surrender Huerta to the Villa commander at Juarez.

May Deport Him to Spain.
Secretary Wilson of the department of labor has under consideration a plan for detaining Huerta in Spain under the immigration laws covering the return of undesirable aliens.

General Funston of the department of Texas, has orders to use the military forces at his disposal to prevent Huerta from crossing the line, while at liberty on bail.

While gathering evidence for the prosecution of Huerta under the federal statutes, until the hearing on July 12, General Huerta will be kept from entering Mexico by the efforts of agents of the department of justice and the troops patrolling on the American border.

Just how General Funston is to take care of Huerta, was not made clear today, but it is understood that American troops will be instructed to watch the border carefully, but of necessity place a guard around Huerta's house and otherwise keep him under surveillance.

It has been definitely determined what action will be taken in request of extradition made by the Villa government of Chihuahua.

Austin, Texas, July 2.—Governor Ferguson returned to his office this morning but no statement was made about the question of the extradition of General Huerta. The state government at Chihuahua, other than that request has been reached and being a federal matter should be forwarded to the department of state at Washington.

Relief Train on Way.

Wheat Goes to Waste.
Laredo, Tex., July 2.—The state of Coahuila, in northeastern Mexico, has the largest wheat crop in sight that it has produced for many years. The harvest is going to waste because of inability to get farm hands. Wheat fields, said a passenger arriving here from Monterrey, Mexico, are being used for pasture for horses and cattle.

WHITE SOX LARRUP TIGERS IN OPENER

Scott Downs Cobbers With Four Bingles, While Schalk Sends In Three Runs—Cubs Lose to Pirates.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Pittsburgh, July 1.—Rowlands is wearing a broad smile tonight, as the result of his little hopes victory over the night "Tigers," the other sensation in the American league. It was Scott's game, Detroit being able to secure but two singles and two triples in the delivery, while Schalk and J. Cobles and Roth contributed doubles that meant five runs, to the Tigers.

Russell will probably face the Cobb team today, with Faber and Beuz following in the other two battles scheduled. The series closes up on Sunday. However, the Cubs, who have been supporting with the stick, for just now, there seems to be no let-up to the South Siders.

Cubs Are Losers.
The Cubs lost yesterday to Pittsburgh at Chicago, by a score of 4 to 1. Manager, star Pirate hurler, let the West Side team down with four hits. Yenchin was liberal with ten bingles.

TWO BASEBALL GAMES FOR JUNGLE CITY AT BELLE CITY NOW.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Racine, Wis., July 2.—Racine fans are getting league baseball for 25¢ a game.
The local club of the Hi-State League has printed 5,000 season tickets, which it will sell at $1 each. These will be good for admittance to every game except those on Independence and Labor days. There are 40 games left to play. A number of these tickets have already been sold and the manager expects to dispose of at least 1,000. It is believed that $4,000 will be sufficient to pull the team through the remainder of the season.

Doc White, old White Sox star, now in charge of the Venice club of the Pacific Coast league, is probably the most cautious, safety first player in the game. In a recent game with Salt Lake, White's team went into the ninth with a five-run lead. White gave a chance for more and he played a slow-footed runner with a faster man. As a result three more runs were scored. White might have been over-cautious, but his attention to every chance to increase a lead might be emulated by other leaders with profit, especially when the pitcher is going badly, as White's was.

Here we have been playing up Eddie Collins as a good golfer and now he says he won't play golf any more this season for fear it may hurt his baseball. What sort of a golfer is that?

MORRIS MILLER

President Hedges of the St. Louis Browns has been down to Miami, Fla., where it is reported he made arrangements for the Browns to train next spring. A new ball park with all conveniences of dressing rooms, etc., will be built at Miami. The Browns found Houston unsatisfactory last spring. The year before they trained at St. Petersburg, but did not return there because of differences over accommodations. The Phillies look that camp last spring—and look where the Phillies are now.

The Chicago White Sox already have commenced purchasing diamonds with their world's series money. Oh, very well. The diamond merchants are just as confident as the Sox are.

Horsemen from several gentlemen's driving clubs are sharpening up their horses for the annual inter-city match, which is to take place over the half-mile track at Goshen, N. Y., July 29, 30 and 31. There will be a 2:14, 2:15, 2:16, 2:17, 2:20, 2:21, 2:23 class for trotters and a free-for-all, 2:10, 2:15, 2:20 class, for pacers. Entries to these events will close July 15.

Tom Gibbons, brother of the St. Paul Phantom, complains that he finds it difficult to obtain recognition because his more noted brother's performances overshadow his own ring exploits. It is a fact that the younger Gibbons has done remarkably well in all his bouts. There are plenty of middleweights of far less promise who are better known. Under some other name he probably would be in great demand, but ring followers in that company and Detroit drafted him. He now is one of the best pitchers in the league and is very likely to make a better record this year than he did last season.

Another great athlete has fallen in the European war in the person of Capt. John Douglas Macintosh, who was a native of Louisville, Kentucky, where he was born forty-five years ago. During the seven years between 1891 and 1897 he gained no less than twelve Scotch amateur championships, six for putting the hammer and six for throwing the hammer, and represented Scotland against Ireland in the first four years of the annual contests, being the winner of the putting event in 1897. In 1898 and again in 1899 he established putting records for Scotland at Edinburgh of 42 feet 1 inch and 43 feet 3 inches respectively. He was connected with the Queen's Edinburgh for twenty-six years.

LOOKS LIKE COBB WILL LEAD LEAGUE; IT'LL BE NINTH STRAIGHT SEASON

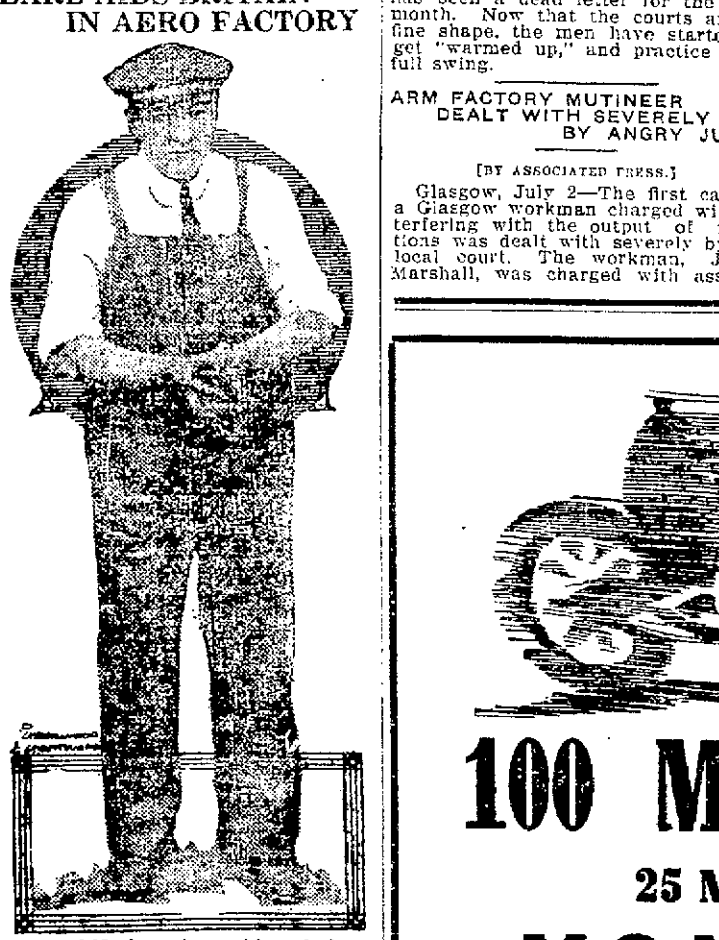

If Ty Cobb continues his present clip he will finish the season at the top of the batting list with ease. It will be the ninth season straight that Cobb has led the American league. He now has an average above .400.

One of the most remarkable comebacks in baseball is Harry Covaleskie, the left-handed pitcher of the Detroit club. Covaleskie was considered one of the major league baseball men five or six years ago he was sent to the Southern league. For a time his work there was only mediocre and those responsible for his going there felt satisfied that no mistake had been made. But Covaleskie continued to improve, and finally became a star in that company and Detroit drafted him. He now is one of the best pitchers in the league and is very likely to make a better record this year than he did last season.

DISTANCE SPEED RECORDS OF AUSTRALIA IN WARTIME

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Melbourne, Australia, July 2.—Australia has set a number of records for distance, including the despatch of troops thousands of miles to the fighting line, and the extraordinary exploits of the submarine A-52 in covering 30,000 miles before her loss at the Dardanelles. Hundreds of wounded Australians are also to be brought back to the Commonwealth from the hospitals at Alexandria as soon as the heat of the Red Sea has lessened. The influx will begin about next October or November, but already steps are being taken to cope with the situation. The Red Cross will bear the brunt of the burden and arrangements for money, supplies, hospitals and other necessities are being made. Many offers of private homes are forthcoming, although it will be several months before the wounded men arrive.

EARL AIDS BRITAIN IN AERO FACTORY

England is stirred by the crying demand from the war office for a greater output in war supplies. The Earl of Norbury, who is fifty-three years of age, has responded to the appeal and is the latest recruit to the ranks of the war supplies manufacturers. He has obtained a job as a fitter in an aeroplane factory and is being paid 14 cents an hour. His hours are from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m.

ing another workman because he was turning out too many shells. The court sentence of three months at hard labor was accompanied by the following statement:

"Although you are making 22 cents an hour and have constant work, you are finding fault with a fellow workman because he is doing his duty to his hour of agony. This assault was committed by you to intimidate him from doing his work like a man. If this happened in Germany—although I think that is hardly possible—you would have been taken out, put in against a wall and shot. The same thing would have happened in France. I am sorry it cannot be done to you here."

Sure of His Facts.
George made a statement to his aunt which she rather doubted, and asked, "Are you not mistaken?" He replied, "Aunt, when I tell you it is, it is."

INFORMATION FOR THOSE WHO WOULD HAVE A TRAVEL VACATION

For the benefit of Gazette readers who travel from time to time The Gazette maintains a Travel Bureau with the intention of supplying the traveling public with information regarding the best roads or steamships, rates, routes, accommodations, sailing dates and other information that may be required by travelers.

With the summer vacation period at hand there is constant demand upon The Gazette Travel Bureau, but no matter how many inquiries are made, no matter how often people call, the desired knowledge is disseminated cheerfully, rapidly and completely.

There will always be found here a plentiful supply of Travel literature from the leading railroads and steamship lines. Right now Exposition literature and descriptions of the Northern woods fishing resorts are in strong demand. This literature is free for the asking. The benefits of this Travel Bureau to the public are two fold. It first of all saves them time in securing their information and then is very apt to save them money and more time by getting a correct routing for their trip, when it is for long distances. Ocean travel has practically stopped since the war, but there is constant demand for the booklets of the Great

Lake and Mississippi river steamship companies. When you are going to travel enlist the services of The Gazette Travel Bureau and go the most enjoyable way. Special information regarding special points can be obtained for prospective travelers at any time. A reasonable length of time ranging from two to four days is required to obtain this special knowledge. The Gazette Travel Bureau was organized to benefit the traveling public and it is urged upon them to make use of this free bureau as much as they like without feeling embarrassed or in any way under any obligations. It is all as free as the air you breathe. Make the most of it.

Yaquis Indians Still Wild As Hills Wherein They Roam

(By Associated Press.)
Nogales, Ariz., July 2.—Although the Yaqui Indians of Sonora are said to have declared war on the United States—at least so far as American settlers in their region are concerned—and United States warships have been dispatched to cope with the situation, information as to the process by which this declaration of war was made is still lacking. It is known that the tribe retains a political organization. What appears to be an almost mythical supreme chief reigns in the hills above the valley and is said to direct the actions of the minor chiefs who have taken groups of the tribe into the Mexican warfare.

The Associated Press correspondent, during a recent trip to the west coast with Carranza learned this and a number of other interesting things concerning the Yaquis, about whom little true material has hitherto been published.

Although they have been in almost constant warfare since the organization of the Mexican nation, the Yaquis never have been fully conquered or won over to European civilization. But their struggle against the advance of civilization did not assume threatening proportions until the recent revolutionary activities gave them modern war munitions and military training. Previously this most warlike Mexican Indian had confined himself to guerilla fighting. The arming of the Yaquis to take part in Mexico's domestic quarrel made possible their more extensive military movements, threatening the American colonists in the Yaqui valley about Guaymas, but the sovereignty of the Mexican state along that rich portion of the valley below.

The Yaqui region lies a few miles inland from the important California Gulf port city of Guaymas. The Indians years ago lost most of their rich agricultural lands in the valley. Their strongholds are in the hill country, from which strong positions they make frequent raids on the Mexican settlers in the valley below. It only recently has been that their assaults were directed against the American settlers in the valley, who had given the Indians profitable employment as laborers.

The Yaqui was not considered an especially dangerous neighbor until the advent of the Constitutional revolution. With the separation of the Carranza and Huerta factions, the struggle began between those two parties in Sonora state. The Indians already had been armed and enlisted as troops in the Constitutional army, doing the bulk of the desperate fighting in the contests for the towns along the Arizona-Sonora border. These Indians were considered "pacified" or peace loving. But on opportune occasions they demanded the return of their tribal lands, and only would remain in the revolution service after securing promises from the factional leaders.

The situation became more serious when Jose Maria Maytorena, the Villa governor of the state, brought the Yaqui troops into northern Sonora. Previously they had been used only against Huerta's federal troops about Guaymas. Maytorena's Yaquis took part in the attacks on the Carranza army in former years under the Diaz administration. These Indians had been driven into southern Sonora by continued fighting along the Arizona border in which they met the federal "muralas," Mexico's rural police which was considered the most efficient fighting arm of the former dictator.

The federal army in southern Mexico of large numbers of Yaqui men had failed to bring the warlike spirit of the race.

Reporters asserted that the Yaqui leaders were controlling the Maytorena government. These were denied officially until the more recent developments showed that the so-called "pacified" Yaquis were working in conjunction with the "Yaqui" or "wild" brothers in their rebellion, or attempt to regain the valley, farming lands now developed to a high degree by the American farmers. The American colonists have both the land and the Mexican owners, who in turn had secured it through government or private concessions in about the same manner as the American Indians' territory in the United States was colonized and developed. The state government found itself powerless to prevent the raids by the "broncho" Indians on the American settlements since the large proportion of the population was not permitted warfare against their hill tribesmen. This led to the sending down the west coast of American marines with the intention of land necessary to save the lives of the American settlers who though in grave danger, would not leave their farms in fear of losing their crops and property.

The Yaquis rival but first cousin, is the Mayo Indian whose lands close by adjoin the Yaqui valley. The Mayo though of good fighting ability and frequently victorious over the Yaquis, has been retained by diplomatic means some valuable farming land. The Mayo also entered the revolutionary struggle. Large numbers of the Mayo braves joined the Carranza ranks, and have been assisting materially in the Obregon victories over the Villa army in central Mexico.

The special characteristics of the Yaqui of Mexico are similar to those of the Apache, who caused continued warfare in the early development of the southwestern United States. The Yaqui is credited with direct relationship to the Apache. Like his northern cousin the Yaqui has been guilty of all manner of brutality directed against his prisoners and is known to have employed modes of torture as skillful as those of the ancient Chinese. This has caused a fear of the Yaqui which is not entirely due to his military ability. The Yaqui became the first Mexican tribe to become fully armed with rifles, and the tribes along the west coast still employ the bow and arrow for hunting and in some cases in fighting any alien invaders.

While retaining his tribal tongue and savage customs, the Yaqui became skilled in military methods. He kept his skillful manner of guerilla warfare, but adopted to a large extent some European methods in the attacks on the Sonora-Arizona border.

Today the Yaqui troops made desperate assaults on the Carranza trenches, changing the positions much in the manner of European soldiers. It has been difficult to make the Mexican troops do this.

The Yaqui in his natural stage of military development had used small drums on which he sang simple marching orders. These drums took the place of the voice or trumpet, and had the advantage by their peculiar sound, in the case of the Yaqui, of being able to locate the source of the sound. In military service with the Mexican neighbors the Yaqui developed a more extensive system of drum beating, and his drum could command a large number of men in all manner of movements. The Yaqui unlike other Indians always until deployed for action, kept his drums merely for the noise of their Yaqui drums which seemed to terrify the enemy when the sound of the drums appeared to come from all directions. In some cases a few Yaqui drummers would crawl to the enemy's flanks and by beating out some signal make it appear that the Yaqui were surrounded.

No reliable information is available as to the Yaqui's actual numerical strength so varying are the reports of the Mexican military authorities and American settlers. But it is known that several thousand rifles, mostly of the military model, are in the hands of the Indians, and that large amounts of ammunition have been obtained by the hill tribesmen. The Yaqui manner of warfare, and familiarity with the country would make most difficult, it is believed by the valley settlers, a complete defeat and disarmament.

(Special to the Gazette.)
Rome, July 2.—Among the funds which are pouring into the Committee in every city of Italy to provide comforts and necessities for those who are suffering directly or indirectly through the war, an interesting contribution of nearly $500 has been received by the Committee for Civil Preparation at Bologna. It was deposited in the name of Count Salina, a well-known patriot of the time, and in forty-nine years it has more than quintupled itself.

Eleven months on trip: HE SHOULD HAVE MADE IN TWO WEEKS TIME.

London, July 2.—The Norwegian ship Hansen has just arrived at Shoreham, England, from Sweden, after being eleven months on a trip, which ordinarily occupies less than a fortnight. The excessive caution of the skipper in avoiding war dangers was responsible for the delay.

A few days after the Hansen left Sweden the war broke out, and the vessel immediately put into a Norwegian port to wait for things to settle down. Several times during the autumn and winter the skipper resolved to make a new start, but each time he was deterred by news of mine fields or submarine activities in the vicinity. It was April when he finally got away, and then, in order to avoid submarines, he took a roundabout course north of Scotland and west of Ireland.

His caution was in vain for off the south Irish coast he was stopped by a German submarine, but after some delay was allowed to proceed.

ARTILLERY FIRE

MAKES EARS SHARP

Soldiers Able To Determine When Enemy Is Shelling Their Position.

(By Associated Press.)
Berlin, July 2.—The war has developed what might be termed an "artillery ear," especially among the soldiers in this branch of the service, which enables them to judge accurately what kind of a shell is being fired at them, and whether or not, it is aimed at their battery or at some other spot. Many lives have been saved by this gradually developed oral alertness.

The artillerist, explains an officer, who has been in the field for months, is able almost instinctively to tell whether a shell is headed for his battery or not. The men have learned to pay not the slightest attention to a shot that gives off the peculiar sound indicating that it is aimed at some other battery or position.

Because of the confusing noise of the artillerist's own battery the squad tending it usually is divided into two groups, one of which listens for the shells of the opponents, and gives the warning to dive for the shelter back of the guns. The men learn to talk with pauses between each word, listening meantime for the tell-tale whistle of the dangerous shell.

Only in the case of the small field cannon, fired at a range of, say 2,000 yards, is it impossible to hear the shell in time to dive into the security of the sheltering "understand." Those shells have reached their mark about as soon as the sound of their discharge.

The 12-centimeter flat-trajectory guns on the other hand, gives just enough warning so that the man can make one dive. There isn't one fraction of a second to be wasted, but by quick action the artillerist can save himself.

The big howitzers, however, give nearly half a minute's warning. As the officers put it, one can hear the shells from these guns and take a half a slice of wurst and take a drink from one's field bottle before seeking shelter. The shelter in this case must be a genuine shelter, consisting of about three layers of heavy wood, and two yards of earth and stone. Else the shelter and artillerist are gone.

PEACE MOVEMENT STARTED.

Denver, Colo., July 2.—A world wide children's peace movement is being planned here today by an organized body of adult peace workers. The movement will be launched in each Sunday and public school of Denver and Colorado. Even this state is thoroughly organized. Every child joining the movement. The pledge follows:

I pledge myself
To add my mite to world harmony
By using my best endeavor
To spread peace.

At all times and in every place—
at home, at school, at work, at play—
To be brave enough to stand against those ignorant ones who declare that "Might is Right, instead of 'Right is Might.'"

I pledge myself further not to quarrel to have no hatred in my heart to be kind to animals; to love nature and to live at "Peace" with my neighbor; myself and my Maker.

of a second to be wasted, but by quick action the artillerist can save himself.

The big howitzers, however, give nearly half a minute's warning. As the officers put it, one can hear the shells from these guns and take a half a slice of wurst and take a drink from one's field bottle before seeking shelter. The shelter in this case must be a genuine shelter, consisting of about three layers of heavy wood, and two yards of earth and stone. Else the shelter and artillerist are gone.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—Father Is Entirely Too Suspicious

My Wash Just Looks Lovely...I Used "SKITCH"

Don't Rub Your Clothes on a Wash Board Any More—"SKITCH" Saves All the Work and Makes Your Clothes Look Grand

Away with the antiquated washboard! A new out-packing of SKITCH saves the internal rub, rub, rubbing of clothes and makes your clothes look fine. I tell all my neighbors what this SKITCH is doing. It does it all. Mrs. E. M. Miller, Cambridge, Ill. "I could not wash without it any more. I got a 10-cent package of SKITCH of your goods and washboard to pieces. Just use three teaspoons of SKITCH in a boiler of clothes, then sit and rest while SKITCH does the dirt out of the clothes. It costs less than soap on every cent. If your clothes don't have SKITCH, send me his name and I'll send you a sample few. Hans H. Johnson, 211 Grand Ave., Milwaukee, Wis."

Drawback of Idleness.

The importunities and perplexities of business are softness and luxury compared with the incessant cravings of vacancy and the unsatisfactory expedients of idleness.—Dr. Johnson.

Prospect of Long Life.
Sir Walter Scott, while traveling in Ireland, was one day accosted by a beggar. He told him that he had nothing smaller than a shilling with him, gave it to the woman, with the words: "You must give me the change next time we meet." "I will, sir," replied the beggar, "and may you honor live till ye get it."

ITCHING NEARLY DROVE A WHOLE FAMILY CRAZY

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 24, 1914: "My husband had a rash all over his body, and soon the WHOLE FAMILY was in the same condition. It looked scaly and raised up. This trouble burned and itched so that it would nearly drive one crazy. It was always worse at night, so we could not sleep. We all had this trouble for about two or three years, and during that time tried many remedies and prescriptions with no results. We tried Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, and it RELIEVED AT ONCE, and before the third jar of ointment had been used, we were all completely cured. It has been four months since we were cured, and there are no traces of the trouble." (Signed) Mrs. S. A. Clarkson, 1520 Iowa Ave.

Every drugist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, and physicians have prescribed them for 20 years in the treatment of skin troubles.

"Yes; they should both reach Wabaska this evening."
Another pause, and at the end of it: "That man Broffin; you'll remember you asked me one day who he was, and I told you he was a special officer for the bank. Is he still here?"

"He is; I saw him on the street this morning."

Again Andrew Galbraith turned his face away, and he was quiet for so long a time that she thought he had fallen asleep. But he had not.

"You're thinking something of the writer-man, lassie? Don't mind the clavers of an old man who never had a chick or child of his ain."

Her answer was such as a child might have made. She lifted the big-plaited hand on the coverlet and pressed it softly to her flushed cheek, and he understood.

"I thought so; I was afraid so," he said, slowly. "You say you have known him a long time; it canna have been long enough, lassie."

"But it is," she insisted, loyally. "I know him better than he knows himself; oh, very much better."

"Ye know the good in him, maybe; there's good in all men, I'm thinking now, though there was a time when I didna believe it."

"I know the good and the bad—and the bad is only the good turned upside down."

Again the sick man wagged his head on the pillow and closed his eyes. "Ye're a loving lassie, Margie, and that's all there is to it," he commented; and after another interval: "What must be, must be. We spoke of this man Broffin; I must see him before Johnson comes. Can ye get him for me, Margie, child?"

She nodded and went downstairs to the telephone, returning almost immediately.

"I was fortunate enough to catch him at the hotel. He will be here in a few minutes," was the word she brought; and Galbraith thanked her with his eyes.

"When he comes, ye'll let me see him alone—just for a few minutes," he begged; and beyond that he said no more.

It was after the click of the gate latch had announced Broffin's arrival that Margie drew the shades to shut out the glare of the afternoon sun, lowering the one at the bed's head so that the light no longer fell upon the instruments of the small house telephone set mounted upon the wall beside the door.

"Mr. Broffin is here, and I'll send him up," she said. "But you mustn't let him stay long, and you mustn't try to talk too much."

The sick man promised, and as she was going away she turned to repeat the caution. Andrew Galbraith's eyes were closed in weariness, and he did not see that she was standing with her back to the wall while she admonished him, or that, when she had gone to send the visitor up, the earpiece of the house telephone set had been detached from its hook and dangled by its wire cord.

Miss Grierson went on into the library after she had met the detective at the door and had told him how to find the upstairs room. When the sound of a cautiously closed door told her that Broffin had entered the sick-room, she snatched the receiver of the library house phone from its hook and held it to her ear. For a little time keen anxiety wrote its sign manual in the knitted brows and the tightly pressed lips. Then she smiled and the dark eyes grew softly radiant. "The dear old saint!" she whispered; "the dear, dear old saint!" And when Broffin came down a few minutes later, she went to open the hall door for him, serenely demure and with honey on her tongue, as befitting the role of "everybody's good angel."

"Did you find him worse than you feared, or better than you hoped?" she asked.

"He's mighty near the edge, I should say—what? But you never can tell. Some of these old fellows can claw back to the top o' the hill after all the doctors in creation have thrown up their hands. I've seen it. What does Doc Farham say?"

"What he always says; 'while there's life, there's hope.'"

Broffin nodded and went his way.

down the walk, stopping at the gate to take up the cigar he had hidden on his arrival.

"So Galbraith's out of it, lock, stock and barrel," he muttered, as he strode thoughtfully toward. "I reckoned it'd be that-a-way, as soon as I heard the story of that shipwreck. And now I ain't so blamed sure that it's Raymer a-holdin' the fort in them pretty black eyes. The old man talked like a man that had just been honeyfugled and talked over and primed plum' up to the muzzle. Why the blue blazes can't she take her iron-molder fellow and be satisfied? She can't swing to both of 'em. Umph!—the old man wanted me to skip out on a wild goose chase to Frisco in that bond business, and take the first train! Sure, I'll go—but not today; oh, no, by grapples; not this day!"

It was possibly an hour beyond Broffin's visit when Margie, having successfully read the sick man to sleep, tiptoed out of the room and went below stairs to shut herself into the hall telephone closet. The number she asked for was that of the Raymer Foundry and Machine works, and Raymer, himself, answered the call.

"He's Trying to Hide and That's What They've Been Waiting For."

"Have you heard anything yet from Mr.—from our friend?"

"Not a word. But I'm not worrying any more now. I've been remembering that he is the happy—or unhappy—possessor of the 'artistic temperament' and that accounts for anything and everything. I'd forgotten that for a few minutes, you know."

"Well?" she said, with the faintest possible accent of impatience.

"He has gone off somewhere to plug away on that book of his; I'm sure of it. And he hasn't gone very far. I'm inclined to believe that Mrs. Holcomb knows where he is—only who won't tell. And somebody else knows, too."

"Who is the somebody else?"

"Though the wire was in a measure public, Raymer risked a single word. 'Charlotte.'"

None of the sudden passion that leaped into Margie Grierson's eyes was suffered to find its way into her voice when she said: "What makes you think that?"

"Oh, a lot of little things. I was over at the house last night, and there is some sort of teapot tempest going on; I couldn't make out just what. But from the way things shaped up, I gathered that our friend was wanted in Lake Boulevard, and wanted badly—for some reason or other. I had to promise that I'd try to dig him up, before I got away."

"Well?" went the questioning word over the wires, and this time the impatient accent was unconcealed.

"I promised; but this morning Doctor Bertie called me up to say that it was all right; that I needn't trouble myself."

"And I needn't have troubled you," said the voice at the Mercede transmitter. "Excuse me, as Hank Billingsly used to say when he happened to shoot the wrong man. Come over when you feel like it—and have time. You mustn't forget that you owe me two calls. Good-by."

After Margie Grierson had let herself out of the stifling little closet under the hall stair, she went into the darkened library and sat for a long time staring at the cold hearth. It was a crooked world, and just now it was a sharply cruel one. There was much to be read between the lines of the short telephone talk with Edward Raymer.

The trap was sprung and its jaws were closing; and in his extremity Kenneth Griswold was turning, not to the woman who had condoned and shielded and paid the costly price, but to the other. "Dear God!" she said softly, when the prolonged stare had brought the quick-springing tears to her eyes; "and I—I could have kept him safe!"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The Pendulum-Swing.

To a man seeking only to escape from himself, all roads are equal and all destinations likely to prove uniformly disappointing. Turning his back upon the iron works in the day of defeat, with no very clear idea of what he should do or where he should go, Griswold pushed through the strikers' picket lines, and, avoiding the militant suburb, drifted by way of sundry outlying residence streets and a country road to the high ground back of the city.

In deserting Raymer he was actuated by no motive of disloyalty. On the contrary, so much of the motive as had any bearing upon his relations with the young iron founder sprang from a generous impulse to free Raymer from an incubus. If it were the curse of the Midas-touch to turn all things to gold, it seemed to be his own peculiar curse to turn the gold to disaster, defeat and tragic depravity. The plunge into the labor conflict had merely served to afford another striking example of his inability to break the evil spell, and Raymer could well spare him.

On the long tramp to the hills the events of the past few months marshaled themselves in ascending review. No human being, save one, of all those with whom he had come in contact since the day of dragon-bearding in the New Orleans bank had escaped the contaminating touch, and each in turn had suffered loss. The man Gavitt had given his name and identity; the mate of the Belle Julie had sacrificed what little respect he may have had for law and order by becoming, potentially, at least, a criminal accessory. The little Irish cab-driver had sold himself for a price, and the negro dockhand had earned his mess of fried fish. The single exception was Charlotte Farnham; and he told himself that she had escaped only because she had done her duty as she saw it.

And as the evening tinge had begun, so it had continued, losing none of its potency for evil. In the little world of Wabaska, which was to have been the theater of Utopian demonstration, the curse had persisted. The money, used with the loftiest intentions, had served only as a means to an end, and the end had proved to be the rearing of an apparently impassable wall of bitter antagonism between master and men. And the secret of the money's origin and acquisition, which was to have been so easily cast aside and ignored, had become a soul-sickness incurable and even contagious. Griswold was beginning to suspect that it had attacked Margie Grierson; that it had subconsciously, if not otherwise, thrust itself into Charlotte Farnham's life; and the days lately past had shown him into what depths it could plunge its wretched guardian and slave.

Now that the plunge had been taken and he had been made to understand that he must henceforth reckon with a base and cowardly undersea which would not stop short of the most heinous crime, he told himself that he must have time to think—to plan.

Caring nothing for its roughness, he followed the country road into a valley forest of oaks. After an hour of aimless tramping he began to have occasional near-hand glimpses of the lake; and a little farther along he came out upon the main-traveled road leading to the summer resort hotel at the head of De Soto bay.

Still without any definite purpose in mind he pushed on, and upon reaching the hotel he went in and registered for a room. Here he drew the window shades and lay down, and since the week of strife had been cutting deeply into the nights, when he awoke it was evening and a cheerful clamor in the dining room beneath told him that it was dinner time.

It is a trite saying that many a gulf, seemingly impassable, has been safely bridged in sleep. Bathed, refreshed and with the tramping stains removed, Griswold went down to dinner with the lost appetite regained.

Early on the following day he sent a note to Mrs. Holcomb by one of the inn employees; but the copy of the Daily Wabaskan laid beside his breakfast plate made it unnecessary to telephone Raymer. The paper had a full account of the sudden ending of the lock-out and the resumption of work in the Raymer plant, and he read it with a curious stirring of self-compassion. As he had reasoned it out, there was only one way in which the result could have been attained so quickly. Had Raymer taken that way, in spite of his wrathful rejection of the suggestion? Doubtless he had; and on the heels of that conclusion came a sense of deprivation that was fairly appalling, and the healthy breakfast appetite vanished. Griswold knew what it meant, or he thought he did. Margie Grierson was gone out of his life—gone beyond recall.

Dinner Stories

An English aristocrat, talking to a friend about the antiquity of her family, was told politely but firmly that she was "a mere mushroom."

"How is that?" she asked, indignantly.

"Why," said her friend, "when I was in Wales, a pedigree of a particular family was shown to me which field more than five large parchment skins and near the middle of it was a note in the margin: 'About this time the world was created.'"

"Captain," said the Kaiser to the commander of the submarine that blew up the Lusitania, "this is one of the great tags in history. Forty centuries look down upon you!"

"Only a strict devotion to perfect neutrality keeps me from suggesting to your majesty that everybody looks down upon him from Cairo to Captain Kidd," put in the third deputy assistant ambassador from the Carribean Islands who appeared, or he present at the moment.—New York Times.

"That th' divvie is all this war" about, anyhow?" asked Pat, laying down his pick and wiping the sweat from his brow.

"Well, Pat," said his reverence, "you see the Germans want a place in the sun."

"Begorry, is that all?" cried Pat. "Sure, an' they can have moine! Phat O'm lookin' fer is a place in th' shade."

"A curious thing happened to me this morning," began the man who always told long-winded stories.

"Did somebody stop to listen to one of your yarns?" inquired the other, reaching for his hat.

Still Available.
"Ah, Miss Joise," said the caller, "I remember meeting you when you were six years old. That was 12 years ago, and I was a young man of twenty-one, and a candidate for office. Yes, I remember the incident well, for I kissed you, and your papa voted for me." "Are you a candidate for office this year?" she coyly inquired. "Because papa is still voting."

Perils of College Life for One Who Is Not a Christian

By REV. HOWARD W. POPE
Superintendent of Miss. Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—Having no hope, and without God in the world.—Ephesians 2:12.

1. Without Christ you can never have a satisfactory philosophy of life. "Whence did I come? What am I here for? Whither am I going?" These are questions which will forever remain unanswered. Life will be an enigma, and doubts will darken your dying hour. Become acquainted with Christ and doubts begin to disappear. You see what you ought to be. You also discover how this change is to be wrought—through Christ's death for you on the cross, and the redemption of his life in you by the Holy Spirit. This is no dream or fiction, but a blessed reality, and he who commits the keeping of his life to the Lord Jesus will soon find it so.

2. Without Christ you can never do your best work. You have insatiable cravings which no one can satisfy but the Lord Jesus. You have a fund of energy which no one can dispel, and powers of usefulness which no one can develop so well as the Savior. Jesus Christ is as indispensable to a thinking man as sunshine to a flower. Consider too the inconsistency of searching all creation for facts, and yet ignoring the greatest fact in the world's history that Christ died and rose again. This alone, the best attested fact in history, makes the appeal to become a Christian supremely rational. If you refuse the appeal, it devolves on you to give the reason why.

3. One's capacity to know God weakens by disease, and may be utterly lost. Charles Darwin said in early life, "I believe God will reveal himself to every individual soul, and my most passionate desire is a deeper and clearer vision of God. But one can easily lose all belief in the spiritual by giving up the continual thought and care for spiritual things." Near the end of his life he said, "In my younger days I was deeply religious, but I made my mind a kind of machine for grinding out general laws in the material world, and my spiritual nature atrophied." His last days were clouded with sadness and spiritual gloom.

Rev. J. Douglass Adam, D. D., of New York, said at a Northfield conference a few years ago, "A friend of mine was once on a parliamentary commission with Prof. T. H. Huxley. They happened to stay at a little country inn over Sunday. Huxley said to my friend, 'I suppose you are going to church this morning?'"

"I am; I always go to church." "I know you do," said Huxley, "but suppose this morning you sit down and talk with me about religion—simple experimental religion?"

"I will," said my friend, "if you mean it." "They sat down together, and my friend out of a deep and rich experience told him of the cross of Christ and pardoning love, and after three hours tears stood in Huxley's eyes and he put out his hand and said, 'If I could only believe that, I would be willing to give my right hand.' What do you call that but intellectual imprisonment? Huxley was perhaps the greatest scientific enemy of Christianity in our generation."

"The same friend told me that again and again Mr. John Morley would come to him in the lobby of the house of commons, and put his hand in his and say, 'I want you to pray for me. I am going to Ireland on important executive business, and I want your prayers.' Morley is perhaps the leading literary agnostic today."

What a pitiful picture! Two masterful minds so impressed by reason that they could not believe! Conscious of their need of God, and yet not knowing how to approach him! A dying man once said to the writer, "I know I ought to turn to God, but I have had my own way so long that now I lack the power to turn. I have lost control of my own will and I must die as I have lived."

The conclusion is this, that every student ought to accept Christ, and ought to do it now. If he waits five years, the chances are that he will never do it. Every year that he puts it off he loses something of his capacity to discern spiritual truth, and to feel its force.

Every man wishes to make the most of himself. The only possible way to do this is to decide now, for every moment some part of his inheritance is slipping away, never to be regained. Strictly speaking, it is NOW or NEVER.

"Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation." (II Cor. 6:2.)

ASSALOM'S FULFILLMENT.

(THE STORY.)

The fate of the Hebrew monarchy trembles in the balance. Once more, now in his old age, David is a fugitive. The graphic narrative describes his small force as "hungry, weary, thirsty." On the other hand, the conspiracy is strong, and the rebel army "increases continually." Humanly speaking, the fortunes of the aged monarch are past retrieving. He stands still, and sees a salvation conspicuously providential.

The glided youth, never so dazzling in the charms to his person, enters triumphantly the capital his father has just evacuated with weeping. He proclaims at once to the abominable king common among Oriental victors—the commission of that unpardonable crime which fixed the character of the war as one of extermination.

A council of war is now called. The venerable Ahithophel advises immediate pursuit by twelve regiments of picked men, which he offers to command. The king, whose person was the only obstacle in Absalom's path. What an incarnation of ill! unnaturalness!

The proposed killing of his father pleased the son. Hand of Providence intervenes! Prayer of David is heard! The counsel of the sage of Gihon, best advice from a merely military standpoint, is made to prevail. The Archite, spy and traitor, adept in sophistry, succeeds in having the Fabian policy adopted, and this insures Absalom's ruin and David's deliverance.

Half an hour of his checkered career, the best traits of David's noble character shine resplendent. He needs not the pen of a rosy bard. He is kindly without. One sees in him a great man bending under the judicial visitations of Providence. While his throne is shattered, his family disrupted, he maintains his self-possession and shows his sagacity in the black counsel of setting off apparently irretrievable misfortune, his piety, submission, generosity, prudence shine like precious jewels.

David's genius for mercy and his natural barrier of the Jordan between himself and the rebel army. He puts the rebel prince in the splendid fortress of Mahanaim. When the battle begins, he chooses the field where his insubstantial guerrillas will have every advantage, knowing that the "wood country" favors more people than the sword. The unpromising protest of his troops is all that restrains his long-haired from taking the field in person. With the moving, unobscured affection of the paternal heart, he has enjoined it upon the commander of each division that they "descent with the vintage man."

Now, upon the very site of his forefather Jacob's wrestling, David enters into an army of soul. The king, like the patriarch, has brought his sword and put on himself by his own mistake. The points of contrast are that David is in a gate, instead of a glade; it is daylight, instead of night; and it is day, instead of a brother as in Jacob's case. "Unholy treason receives its deserts that day. There is defeat, with slaughter. Absalom's vanity fortifies his career and insures his doom. His ambrosial locks identify him, as does the very beast that bears him. Nature herself furnishes a gibbet for this natural son. His luxuriant hair, perhaps, serves the black-cap of the hangman. Suspended between heaven and earth, he gazes upon the phenomenal chaos at his feet as into the very mouth of hell, going to receive him. Into that pit a moment later, his disheveled corpse is cast."

The last picture in the somber gallery is drawn by a master-hand. It is true to the life in pathos and naturalness, nothing in literature surpasses it. Up to the stone steps to the chamber over the gate goes the chafed monarch, crying in his grief, "We can look into the depths of a broken heart! It is a revelation of parental tenderness, forgiveness, and disappointed ambition."

Carlyle says of Burns: "The canny shins sweetest when it has been longest trained in a darkened cage." So David learned in suffering what he taught in song. Psalms 1, 40, 53, 59, and 109 are attributed to this period. Ahithophel was David's Judas Iscariot. He portrays his treason in the words, "It was thou, mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance. We took sweet counsel together, and walked unto the house of God in company." Words that remind us of Canaan, "And thou, Brutus!"

Yet the stinging of the sword that Ahithophel was justified in his desertion of David. It is enough to say that Bathsheba was his granddaughter. Absalom's revolt is a type of the sinner's revolt against God. In both instances, it is deliberate, unreasoning, directed against paternal goodness. If persisted in, there will be the same outcome—shame and death.

What more could David have done that he did not do to save Absalom's life? He expressly commanded the captain in hearing of the army to spare his son. The soldier who discovered Absalom's sorry plight showed a tender regard for the king's request. At the same time he had an eye to his own interest; for, as he intimated, he had dispatched Absalom, he would have made a scapegoat of him.

The killing of Absalom was a military necessity. It was a legal execution. The rebel prince had four times over forfeited his life. Absalom's burial was like that of a common malefactor. He had vowed for himself an imperial mausoleum, where he expected to be laid with royal obsequies; but his disheveled corpse was tossed into a ditch.

David's lament for his son is a nation's dirge. But perhaps if he had lived more for the boy, he would not have needed to wish to die for him. Absorbed in the pleasures of his palace and in the affairs of state, in peace and in war and in plans for building a temple, there was precious little time left for a son at the moment when he desperately needed attention and discipline. The stinging of it, too, was that the father's example had not always been beyond reproach.

Sharper than a serpent's tooth is David's very heart. Other insults, treacheries, and losses were small affairs compared with this.

NATIONAL IDEAS AND HOW HOME MISSIONS WILL PROMOTE THEM.

It was the prophet Hosea who first projected into Hebrew literature the figure of marriage as describing the relation subsisting between God and Israel. He learned the consequences of infidelity in that relation in the bitter experience of his own marriage. He can think of nothing more shameful or remediless than a nation unfaithful to its vows. The prophet Isaiah puts the same figure in a positive form when he describes God as a bridegroom rejoicing in his bride. She is as resplendent as a crown of glory and as a royal diadem. The consciousness of an immediate relation with the Deity, of accountability to him of rational conduct as giving him pain or pleasure—that is what makes a nation great and strong. The irreligious nation is always the dissolute nation.

Guessed What Donation Was.
A certain usher in a village church had a way of his own of dealing with cases of doubtful charity. One Sunday he came around with the bag to a gentleman of doubtful open-handedness. This worthy, remembering, no doubt, that one should not publish one's good deeds too widely, concealed his donation in his close-shut fist and reached for the bag, whereupon the collector, deftly withdrawing it before he could reach it, said in a stern whisper: "Give it to me, sir. One has just come off my waistcoat."

Sanford Soverhill Plans to Operate Stemming and Booking Plant at Greene Warehouse—Use Wisconsin Crop.

Sanford Soverhill is making arrangements to install at the Greene tobacco warehouse a stemming and booking plant, to be operated for the purpose of supplying the English market with prepared cigar leaf from the Badger 1915 crop. It is planned that the work will be under the direction of Osmond Gunderson, a man with years of experience preparing leaf, he having done similar work at Sloughton several years ago. In late years, very little Wisconsin leaf has been prepared for the English trade.

Tobacco intended for the English market should be especially prepared, and all precautions taken to see that most of the moisture is taken out of the leaf without any injury to the crop. Because of the extremely high duty levied on imported tobacco, the utmost care is taken in preparing leaf for shipment.

The Wisconsin tobacco market, as sent out from Edgerton on July 2d, is as follows:

The close of the present week will see the 1915 tobacco crop very generally transferred to the fields and well started in good time and under most favorable conditions. Warm days are now putting all crops forward at an amazing pace and every day helps to get on a belated season. The growers have now only to see that the needed cultivation is given the fields that the crop may make its usual progress.

A few more of the warehouses have closed during the week and the end of handling the 1914 packing is almost in sight now. Labor has been employed in many of them nearly six months and is now being turned towards stemming the balance of the year.

It is claimed that business in cured leaf in the eastern markets is picking up somewhat, but local packers have experienced but little inquiry for old tobacco. Buyers looking for binder stock would be welcomed with open arms. The first warm weather to start preparation has at last arrived and tobacco in the warehouses has commenced to warm up.

The shipments out of storage reach about 700 cases for the week to all points from this market.

CUBIST ART PAINTS BELGIAN SUFFERING

Flight From Country Devastated by Germans Proves Inspiring Subject for Symbolist Artists

The Hague, Netherlands, July 2.—The Jan Torny, a Belgian painter, held here, reveals three remarkable works of Holland's most distinguished religious symbolist and modernist in art, devoted to "The Flight from Belgium." Both here and in Amsterdam, where they have already been shown, these studies have created comment. Conceived in an exalted symbolism and executed in a modified cubist style, they have not only captivated the conservative Dutch public.

"After all," said Mr. de Naeve to Habbrecht, one of the younger and more radical artists of the Netherlands, "how is one to put upon canvas the suffering and the incredible wrongs of the Flemish population of Belgium, merely picturing isolated instances of atrocious acts? It is a situation where only the most comprehensive symbolism can possibly give complete expression to the subject." He said that Jan Torny has attempted.

The most remarkable of the three pictures is entitled "The Flight—1914." It has been purchased by the Municipal Museum of Amsterdam. In general character it is cubist, as well as symbolist. The artist has not employed that blurring of primary colors of which he is so fond in his landscape studies. The entire work is a study in browns, with a flat perspective almost Dureresque. In the background are seen the roofs and facades of a city, prominent among which is a church, from whose windows flames are curling. In the foreground is a white-headed, female figure, in no sense identified save by a certain suggestion of a woman's dress. This is a holding a simple, wooden cross tightly clasped to the breast. With the utmost poignancy the figure seems an intangible burden of pain, leading a crooked, weary length across the whole of the foreground of the composition, in an attitude of the blind and most precipitated flight. Behind, in the middle distance, are the colored faces of a group of children, five in all, a subject which the artist has treated in the most urgent desperation. The whole constitutes a vision of the horrors of the Belgian exodus, expressing in this way, probably in more enduring form, the spirit of the Belgian people driven from their native soil. The artist, Adrian Ost, another Belgian, has been able to achieve by employing an almost equally striking realism of the "Holy Child," has inspired the Dutch poet, Mink Janse, to a verse written upon seeing Torny's unusual painting. This has also translated others of Torny's works into poetic prose, which has been widely published in the Netherlands, adding to the fame which the artist's extraordinary symbolism has secured for him.

Torny, however, has one advantage over many of the cubists, futurists and symbolists whose work has been a source of amusement to the general public for some time. He not only can both draw and paint, but has done so with success, his careful, realistic work of many years ago still being considered as able as that of any of the contemporary school of Dutch painters. It would be difficult to imagine a more striking contrast than that afforded by the present exhibition by the artist, side by side of one of the paintings of Torny's earlier, materialistic manner, "The Breaker," a piece of admirable realism, and a work conceived in the Aubrey Beardsley style, called "The Deep Sea."

Torny's personal history is by no means an ordinary one. An "indo," as the colonial half-breeds are called, having been Sumatra in the Dutch East Indies, he has been a painter of magnificent realism. Furthermore, he was himself a pronounced materialist, holding no religious convictions. With his conversion to Catholicism, however, the whole style of his painting changed. He abandoned his seeking to express in line and color the luxury of the Roman Catholic church, and instead of the realistic conception in "The Breaker," he drew "Love" and "The Flight from Belgium."

But There Will Be Lack of Uniformity of Production.

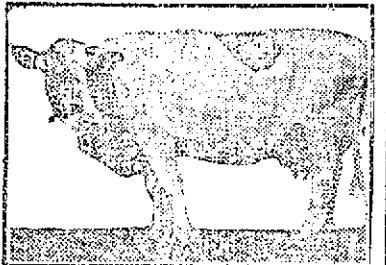

To change breeds every now and then is poor practice. One should be very careful before the particular breed is chosen. To use a Holstein once a year in order to obtain a large flow of milk, a Guernsey sire another year to secure richness of milk, and a Shorthorn sire the next time to obtain more beef in the offspring, is the wrong principle to employ in the breeding and raising of good cows.

Undoubtedly some good cows will be obtained in the herd from such methods of procedure, but there will be no uniformity of size, form, appearance and production, and the owner has no assurance of what he is going to get in the future. It is a case of too many in the mixture and it is guess work as to which one will come to the top. First, select the breed with great care, then stick to it. If a mistake is made the first time in obtaining poor specimens, and poor producers, then rectify the mistake as soon as possible by selecting the right kind of a sire belonging to the same breed to head the herd, or by selling the animals already bought, and purchasing better individuals belonging to the same breed. It is usually safer to try to improve within the same breed than it is to improve by changing to a different breed. There are good individuals and good strains within any of the breeds intended for a particular purpose.

HOLSTEINS ARE IN DEMAND

Popular Among Dairy Breeds Because
They Bring in Most Profit—
Hardy and Prolific.

Holstein-Friesians are very popular among the dairy breeds. They produce great quantities of good milk at low cost, are hardy, healthy, handsome and prolific, and when one is through with the old cow as a milk machine there is plenty of meat for beef or hogs. The Holsteins have won their way on merit and good advertising, and they will stay to the front because in the estimation of practical farmers they bring in the greatest profit, says Farm and Home. Of late there has been a tendency to unduly magnify certain lines of Holstein breeding and to push prices to high marks—in other words a boom, in which prices with four and five figures are common. It may be that bull calves are worth $10,000 to $20,000 each, but no one is justified by past experience in paying any such amount of real money unless he can afford to lose it. When cows sell for several thousand dollars, they become the rich man's plaything, rather than the poor man's support.

Agreement is Far Away.
The pros and cons of dairy farming are likely to be discussed for a long time before an agreement is reached; and, in the meantime, the cow is pushing herself to the front in regions where she has not been highly esteemed.

Keeping Unprofitable Cows.
If you had a hired man who was not earning enough to pay his board would you keep him long? Then why do you keep the cow that does not make enough milk to pay for her keep? Many farmers are doing just that thing.

DAIRY NOTES

Young calves must be given every opportunity for health and growth.

Avoid putting too many cows in one pasture to reduce the feed to the smallest quantity for each cow.

Don't neglect any broken wires in the barbed wire fence where the dairy herd is pastured. Out wires are not profitable.

If there is the least idea in your mind that any of your cows are troubled with tuberculosis, use the test at once.

When possible test the cow's milk before buying her, and remember it does not pay to buy a cow whose milk tests much below three per cent.

The cow and calf should be gradually weaned from each other, and to that end their quarters, when separated should be in proximity to each other.

The Man Afraid.
Isn't it funny that the bigger fool a man is the more he suspects everybody of trying to make a monkey of him? Some things in this world are mighty hard to hide. The one thing that saves many of us is that the rest are not paying us any attention.—Los Angeles Times.

Fishermen's Guide.
The pilchard fishermen of Cornwall watch the movements of gannets; for as soon as they see a flock they know that a shoal of pilchards is at hand and get their nets ready. By their flight they know whether the fish are at the surface or deep down.

SPEAKS ON TECHNIC OF TWILIGHT SLEEP

Chicago Woman Doctor Refutes
Statements Made by Another Recently at San Francisco.

Chicago, July 2.—"The demand by mothers for twilight sleep is but a part of the feminist movement," said Dr. Sarah M. Hobson of Chicago, at a meeting of the Obstetrical Society of the American Institute of Homeopathy, here today. Dr. Hobson, who is secretary of the Institute, was discussing a paper on "The Technique of Twilight Sleep," by Dr. Florence Ward of San Francisco.

The feminist movement calls for the opportunity of living in accord with evolution of the individual and society, rather than to be bound by tradition, she continued. Dr. Hobson rejects the materialistic interpretation of the ancient theology, "saved through childbearing" and is likely to report: "If Adam were allowed to sleep for a few minutes, I demand twilight sleep, forgetfulness of the anguish of six to twenty-six hours."

The observant mother has always been the keenest critic of medical procedure. It was the critical mother who was prompt to charge the general practitioner with careless cleaning of the clinical thermometer, passed from month to month. It was the woman, both mother and club-woman, who made caustic comment upon the medical essayist who, although familiar with the clinical thermometer, mistook the finger with saliva to turn the pages of his manuscript.

The technique of twilight sleep, Dr. Hobson pointed out, comprises the following:

1. Environment of quiet, rejecting all external irritation of nerve centers.
2. Initial minimal dose of morphine or its derivatives.
3. Continued observation by a trained attendant.
4. A stable preparation of scopalamine.
5. Repetition of the minimal dose which will keep the patient in the zone of amnesia, that is, perception of impressions but no memory.
6. Individualization of the patient in order to maintain not absolute unconsciousness of pain, but a drowsiness, rousing during a pain to exert muscular contraction, but with no memory of the anguish.

"This is a narrow zone and demands a nicely of technique which forbids either spectacular exhibition or individualism of the practitioner," said Dr. Hobson. "Infinite patience and painstaking attention mean time and money in order to give the patient the close observation, particular environment and correct minimal dosage necessary for the individual case."

WIFE OF HIS NEGRO CLAIMS SHE IS WHITE.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
San Francisco, July 2.—Efforts of Mrs. William M. Lytle, wife of a physician, to obtain an annulment of marriage on the ground that a scientific blood test proves her to be pure white, have stirred up a warm discussion among physicians and churchmen here.

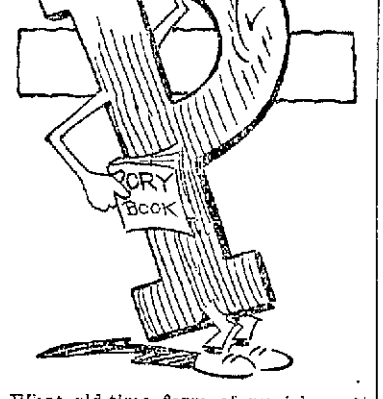

Professor Frederick P. Gay of the University of California holds that there is no blood test which will determine whether a person has a trace of non-Caucasian blood.

"All human blood, regardless of race, responds to the same reactions," declared Dr. Gay. "It proved this by a series of experiments on human blood, he said, that if a man claims he can tell by a blood test the difference between a black man and a white, he is either faking it, or he has discovered a process that will make him famous. We have not got far enough along to tell that difference between them yet."

"But we are able to tell the difference between human blood and animal blood. This is done by immunizing a rabbit against human blood and then testing the sample with the immunized blood several days later. If the rabbit's blood coagulates, the sample is human blood. This test is frequently used in the criminal courts."

The only safe manner of telling whites from blacks is by comparing the color under the fingernails. "This is the only method known to science," Mrs. Lytle declared, however, that her physician has clearly established the use of the blood test, and she has been told so it seems probable that there will be a clash of scientists when the case gets to court.

Mrs. Lytle, who signs her complaint Margaret Buckner, says she married Dr. Lytle when under the impression that she had negro blood in her veins. Taken from a convict by a negro "Mammy," she says she was raised from the belief that she was a negro. After her marriage, white friends ridiculed the claim that she was colored, and the blood test followed.

What old-time form of punishment?
